'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

I believe it was Kipling—maybe it wasn't—who once said that a man would do almost anything for the woman he loves. And when Kipling, or whoever it was, said that, he quoted a mouthful, no less.

A good woman can make a good man better. And on the other hand, a woman can make a sap out of the best man in the world.

Take Z, for instance. For some time he applied himself to his calling, showing great promise in his line. Ahead of him he had a wonderful future.

Then he fell in love. The girl friend kept telling him he was good—that he could do bigger and better things—that he was illy paid in his job—that he should strike for a raise. He was good, she said. No one realized it, but he was the best man his firm ever employed.

And he fell for it, hook, line and sinker. In a short time his natural egoism asserted itself, and he believed firmly that he was better than the man under whom he worked—a person who had spent years in the business. As a result, he lost interest in his work; he felt he was badly abused, ill paid and unappreciated.

And thus it was that today, this person is doing nothing at all. He was fired from his job at a time when good jobs are scarce. Today he doesn't know what he will do—but he still thinks he is good. And she thinks so too.

Then there is X, for instance. At his university, X was one of the best geologists that the college ever turned out. Then he fell in love with the daughter of an old friend of the family—a girl that was not worthy, and still isn't, of her salt.

She lead him on, promised to marry him, accepted his ring and two weeks before they were to be married she eloped with another man. Now X is in the jungles in the Orient, the only white man within 500 miles, living with the natives, hunting for that precious black gold men call oil, and trying to forget.

And then there is Y. At college he was a star athlete and a promising artist. Ahead of him lay a wonderful future in art. And he fell in love. He became engaged to this girl. And then, one day, she disappeared, and so did his best pal, a fraternity brother. The next day he received a wire from them. They had been married.

Y dropped from sight. No one knew where he was. And then, only a few weeks ago, we stumbled across him. We had gone to San Francisco to see an art exhibit at a certain gallery. It was there we bumped into a soldier—it was Y, standing before a portrait of a beautiful girl.

For a second he stared at us, hesitated as if to go away, and then stopped. We shook hands and introduced him to the rest of the party.

"Yes," he replied to our questioning. "I'm a buck private in the rear rank of the last squad of the last platoon in this company. And I'll be there until I've served my 30 years and can retire. My work? Blah, I'm finished with art. A man has to have some inspiration to paint. I haven't any. Don't worry about me kid; I'm just as well off as I can be. Well, see you later," and he dashed off.

Now some of you, who know cases that are just opposite, will come dashing into the office, or call us up, to tell me that I've only cited the worst side of the question. Save your breath—we know it.

There are two sides to the argument, and our personal opinion is that the other side, the one we have not cited, overbalances the side we've just told about.

Commissioner Traung Tells Of Threats On Life MORE BODIES FOUND IN WRECK OF SHIP

BOXING PROBE CONTINUED BY STATE BOARD

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—UP—Disclosures of a startling nature were made to the governor's committee investigating California's boxing conditions by Charles F. Traung, state athletic commissioner, and Harold Emmal, San Francisco district inspector for the commission.

Traung said threats had been made against his life. Emmal charged that when Johnny Anderson received injuries in a recent bout with "Red" Kuehl which later caused his death he was "neglected" at an emergency hospital.

While Traung was on the stand, Harry Brand, a member of the committee appointed by Governor C. C. Young, asked:

"Do you like your job?"
"No," Traung replied. "And I'll tell you why. My life has been repeatedly threatened since this investigation began and before."

Life Threatened

"I have received anonymous telephone calls and letters, saying I would be taken for a ride. The persecutors have telephoned my home and terrorized my wife, and told her the next time she found me would be in the morgue, and other things. It got so bad I had to have my telephone number changed."

Most of Traung's testimony was of a technical nature.

Emmal went before the committee this afternoon.

"From the time Anderson went to the hospital until he died they didn't do a thing for him," he charged. "All they did was to stick him in a bed and leave him there and the records will show it."

Dr. Edmund P. Butler, chief surgeon of the city's emergency hospital system, promised a thorough investigation immediately.

Emmal also testified that the former amateur boxing law was "a farce."

He said he was formerly a boxer himself.

"I used to get my medal at the front door, and then go to the back door to get my pay, he said. The most I ever received was about $600."

MARTIAL LAW IN HAVANA

HAVANA, Cuba, Nov. 13.—UP—Havana was under martial law tonight, the soldiers having assumed command in mid-afternoon after hours of rioting in which mobs led by students hostile to the government battled with police and small detachments of mounted troops.

Unofficial estimates placed the number of dead at six and the number of injured at from 20 to 25. Among the casualties was Arturo T. Soria, 24, of Key West, Fla., who was reported critically wounded by a police bullet.

The shooting of Soria, who although residing here for four years has retained his United States citizenship, was typical of a number of lesser frays taking place in the leading business section of the city throughout the day.

Soria was said to have engaged in a controversy with two policemen and to have scuffled with them. Three other officers dashed up and one of them shot Soria in the chest. He was taken to a hospital for an emergency operation.

Evidence of authorities' fear of renewed outbreaks was seen in the dispatching of a cordon to draw up (Continued on page 2)

BLAST RAZES 40 FOOT STACK

Richmond's downtown district received a severe shake late yesterday when backfire in an oil furnace at Eighth and Macdonald avenue caused a brick chimney nearly 40 feet tall to tumble to the ground.

No one was injured, but the blast brought scores of persons to the scene where a small blaze was extinguished by the fire department.

The boiler is used to furnish heat to rooms at 313 Eighth street. The brick chimney built from the ground, and adjoining the building, was estimated to contain nearly a ton of bricks.

Fire Chief W. P. Cooper investigating the blast reported last night that a defective flue had caused the explosion.

The iron door of the furnace was blown from its hinges, and other parts of the mechanism was damaged.

PROBE ON IN CAR CRASH

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—UP—The conductor and motorman of a Municipal Street Railway car that was struck in Twin Peak tunnel here late Wednesday, causing injuries to 13 persons, will be tried before the board of public works on charges of negligence.

C. A. Lund the conductor, and Robert Hanlon, the motorman, handed in their resignations today but they were refused and the trial was ordered. Fred Boeken, superintendent of the railway, charged in his report that they violated rules when they backed up their car 500 feet when a passenger dropped a coin from the rear platform and that this alleged negligence was responsible for another car entering the tunnel ramming into it.

The motorman of the second car Arthur Anderson, was still in a critical condition with both legs broken and internal injuries. Tom Watson, 13, who was beside Anderson when the crash happened, lost his leg but is expected to recover.

Watson, brother-in-law of Herbert Hoover, Jr., and a cousin of Mrs. Helen Willis Moody, Jr., by marriage was credited for possibly saving the life of Anderson. When rescuers came to him he said:

"I'm all right—I'm a boy scout. Help the man, he's worse off than I."

SANTA FE IN VICTORY OVER LINKERS

The Santa Fe cagers gained their first victory of the 1930 Richmond City basketball league last night when they conquered the Odd Fellows by a score of 23 to 13.

The B division officers are fans a maximum amount of action last night when the Garfinkle five defeated the Civic Center Tires by a score of 20 to 19.

Santa Fe and the Linkers fought for a narrow lead throughout the first three quarters of the A division contest. Both squads were tied 4 to 4 at the conclusion of the first quarter. The second quarter was almost an exact replica of the first in action and closeness of score, the half ending with the Santa Fe leading 8 to 7. The Odd Fellows still trailed the Santa Fe boys closely during the third period, with the result that the scoreboard read at the conclusion of the third quarter 12 to 11 in favor of Santa Fe.

Up until the fourth quarter both teams had been playing on a pretty even basis. The general playing standard was a trifle sloppy, both teams miffing countless clear shots and failing to show the team work that both are capable of. However, the Santa Fe athletes finally came out of the general slump in the fourth quarter, and with a fierce passing attack, brought the lodgemen's bucket into grave and fatal danger. Tricky hole shots by E. Nelson and Tula and clever work at the pivotal center by John Nelson and a donation of many foul shots were the undoing of the Odd Fellows. The Lodgemen swept down toward the Santa Fe backboard several times during the final quarter in a valiant attempt to get back into their proximity to the Santa Fe score, but the Santa Fe defense held until the final whistle.

By winning their game last night against the Odd Fellows, the Santa Fe five went into a tie for second place in the A division standing with the Odd Fellows, each having won one contest and lost one. The McRacken squad is leading the league with two victories and no defeats, while the Studebaker bring up the rear with no victories and two losses.

Garfinkles Win
The B division tussle was probably the most competitive contest of last night's two events. Neither team could gain an advantage during the first two quarters, with the result that they were tied, 10 to 10 at the end of the second quarter. The Civic Center Tires and the Garfinkles played a neck-and-neck during the first part of the final quarter, but Garfinkles gradually drew away from the Tires toward the end of the clash. However, Civic Center Tires again swooped down upon the Garfinkle basket, and a nicely placed shot by Leo Sassone placed the ball in the Garfinkle net to put his team within one point of the leading cagers. However, the whistle immediately busted the Tires' hopes of victory in that tussle.

The Garfinkle aggregation is still leading the B division with two wins and no losses. The Civic Center Tires and the Garfinkles are tied for second place, each team having one defeat and one victory on its record. Ben Malik's are in third place with no victories and two defeats.

The Santa Fe lineup last night consisted of: Tula 9, Gadoury, E. Nelson 3, forwards; J. Nelson, 10, center; A. Roche, 1, R. Bowen guards.

The Odd Fellow squad included: Viano 2, DeBaere 2, Walter Gordon 4, forwards; Baldwin 5, center; Gualdoni, G. Gordon, Taylor guards.

The Garfinkle athletes who played last night were: Page 4, Marcus 4, Melin 3, forwards; Arnold, center; Weeks 5, O'Connell 4, Maloney, Swenson, guards.

The Civic Center Tires were: Randall 4, Sassone 6, forwards; Hovada 2, Seawright 2, center; Williams 5, Ferguson, Buismarner guards.

Notre Dame To Play Charity Contest In 1931

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—UP—Plans for raising charity funds through the Notre Dame Northwestern football game, Nov. 22 at Soldier Field were abandoned today, but a charity fund of $100,000 to be raised by a similar game in 1931 will be made available immediately if an offer made by Northwestern University is accepted.

Northwestern officials announced it would be a "physical impossibility" to arrange transfer of the Nov. 22 game from Dwyer Field to Soldier stadium, where receipts from 60,000 excess seats over Dwyer stadium's 48,000 capacity would have gone to charity. The announcement was accompanied by a proposal:

To advance $100,000 to the State Commission on Unemployment and Relief.

To move the 1931 Northwestern-Notre Dame game, scheduled at Notre Dame stadium, to Soldier Field.

To take out Northwestern and Notre Dame's share in the proceeds of the 1931 game, the amount of money which a maximum seat sale at Notre Dame's 52,000 capacity stadium would bring, with the difference between the maximum receivable at Soldier Field to be given to charity after Northwestern's $100,000 is returned.

The offer to advance the $100,000 is contingent on the Big Ten faculty committee giving permission for transfer of the 1931 game, on Notre Dame's agreement to the shift and on the obtaining of the rent for the use of the stadium for the game.

Charity Grid Game Will Be Played Dec. 6

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—UP—New York football fans will be given two opportunities to turn their enthusiasm for the game into worthy channels at the close of the regular season when New York University meets Colgate and a group of former Notre Dame stars clashes with the New York Professional Giants for the benefit of the unemployed.

The college game will be played here Dec. 6, while the old timers' Prof. engagement is booked for Dec. 14.

Mayor James J. Walker and a committee of sports writers announced the two games today. The mayor said that the entire receipts of the two games, save for the bare expense of bringing out-of-town elevens to the city, would be donated to the unemployment fund.

The two games are expected to net something like $500,000, with a larger sum possible if the seats and boxes are auctioned.

Fordham Gets New Mascot

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—UP—With no trumpets to herald his approach, and with his shaggy head draped unceremoniously over the tailboard of a rickety truck, Ramesses IV, successor to Ramesses III, as mascot of the underdog Fordham eleven, arrived at the university today.

Ramesses IV's rescue from the slaughterhouse was effected after a pack of wild dogs had set upon Ramesses III and sent him wherever good and faithful rams go.

The new mascot greeted with cheers for Fordham meet, powerful St. Mary's on Saturday, and without a mascot chewing along the sidelines the Maroon chances would be very slim, indeed.

around a five-and-ten-cent store. A rumor had spread that students were planning to storm the stores hardware department to obtain knives, hatchets and other weapons.

An army truck manned by soldiers and loaded with machine guns was stationed in front of police headquarters prepared to cope with any fresh demonstration.

Big Clash
Today's skirmishes climaxed a series of minor riots breaking out over a six-week period due principally to antipathy of large groups of Cuban students toward what they term the "autocratic" rule of President Machado. Although heretofore the students have attracted little public support it was noticeable that tradesmen joined them in the fighting today.

The rioting began in the morning in front of the newspaper El Pais, where a woman was killed in a melee yesterday. Police and troop patrols on duty at the building were unable to disperse the crowd and cavalry was summoned.

When the demonstration in front of El Pais was finally broken up a crowd of some 200 persons collected in front of the building housing the Havana Post, English language newspaper. Here again windows and electric lights were smashed by the mobs.

Cavalry Charge
The cavalry charged anew and one youth, presumably a student, was badly gashed by a sabre swipe. The modus operandi did not vary in half a dozen other melees.

The troops patrolled the streets and gave orders to move along to any group, however small. If the order was not obeyed quickly the bat of the machete was applied. One man, it was reported, hurled a sugar bowl at one of the soldiers above.

Senior Grid Team Plays 0 To 0 Tie

An 0 to 0 tie was the result of a football clash between the seniors and lower classmen of Richmond Union High school yesterday morning on the high school field.

The game was played in answer to a football challenge from the senior class. The contest was only about one-fifth the length of an ordinary game, as school hours necessitated a short game. The tussle was a rather razzed affair, neither team being able to complete passes or to avoid an exceptional number of fumbles.

The senior griders were: Drexel and Julierat, ends; Lilly and Ball, tackles; Hoeffer and Baxter, guards; Erignone, center; Boschetti, quarterback; Bob Miller and Snograss, halfbacks; Stoddard, fullback.

The athletes included in the lineup for the lower classmen were: Gerletti, Pas-one, ends; Ferry and Robak, tackles; Avilla and Kio-bas, guards; Hall, center; Piziali and George Miller, halfbacks; Searse's, quarterback; and Bravin, fullback.

Losing Coaches Keep Their Jobs At Chicago, Illni

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—UP—Two shining exceptions to the accepted theory that a football coach must produce a winner to hold his job are furnished this season by a pair of "Big Ten" mentors—Alonzo A. Stagg of Chicago and Robert C. Zuppke of Illinois.

Chicago hasn't won a game since the opening day of the season, and Illinois has lost four important games in succession, yet, strangely enough, there isn't any criticism of Stagg and Zuppke or demands from irate alumni that they be fired.

Chicago and Illinois will meet Saturday at Stagg Field, and it seems that it will be the last chance for either to win a game this season. Even if a tie game results and both finish the year without a major victory, Stagg and Zuppke can go on as long as they like in their present positions.

Strict eligibility, limited enrollment and lack of material have contributed largely to the decline of Chicago's teams. In the last five complete years Chicago has won only 14 out of 40 games. Before the tail period, however, Chicago had consistently good elevens.

The winning or losing of a football game doesn't mean much to Stagg, who is now in his 69th year and who has been coaching at Chicago since 1892.

"Most everyone takes football too seriously," said Stagg. "If the boys enjoy the game, learn a little something and get some valuable athletic training, it really doesn't matter whether they win or lose. Any boy can never for the Chicago team and stay out as long as he likes. I have dismissed a player from the squad as long as I have been coaching."

Zuppke has a reputation for the ability of his team to win unexpected victories. In 16 seasons as head coach at Illinois, his teams have won 90 games, lost 29 and tied 8.

COMEDY RIOT AT FOX TODAY

The scream of screams "Up the River," a gorgeous melange of rib-tickling dialogue and uproarious situations, opened at the Fox-California Theater yesterday and the audience, exhausted from more than an hour of almost continuous laughter, tottered out, only to be replaced with another crowd anxious to see a picture that is undoubtedly one of the funniest of feelings since the advent of talking pictures.

It would only spoil a perfect comedy to reveal the plot here but it revolves about the hilarious efforts of two champion jail breakers to manipulate a romance to their satisfaction. Eventually they attain their goal but not until they have broken in and out of jail two or three times, committed a burglary and various other forms of malfeasance and incidentally provided hundreds of side-splitting laughs.

The story, an original by the author of that delicious stage satire, "Chicago," Maurine Watkins; the direction by John Ford, the man who gave us such unforgettable films as "Men Without Women" and the gold medal winning "Four Sons" and a huge cast of notable comedians and comedienne, the cream of the stage and screen ranks, all work in harmony to make "Up the River" a well come and uproarious addition to the current picture season.

Spencer Tracy and Warren Hymer take first honors as the two self-appointed Cupids with Claire Luce and Humphrey Bogart as the young lovers and William Collier, Jr., as the hard boiled lifer giving splendid performances.

Joan "Charlie" Lawes delightful child actress who makes her debut in this Movietone mirthquake could not fail to be convincing as the warden's daughter as she plays a real life role, her own father being none other than Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing prison.

See "Up the River" by all means, it's a genuine treat.

Los Angeles In War On Gangs

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 13.—UP—Eastern gangsters hope to gain a foothold in Los Angeles before the Olympic games in 1932. District Attorney Byron Fitts said today in announcing formation of a 15-man "gang squad" to make a drive on crime.

The squad consists of picked members of the sheriff's force, the police department and the district attorney's investigation bureau. Fitts said his information of gangster plans came from "undercover" men who had been placed in Chicago and New York underworld circles.

The gang squad was formed as a result of recent diamond robberies and reports that three wealthy men had been kidnapped and after buying their release had remained silent through fear.

Robinson Will Aid President

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—UP—Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic floor-leader of the senate, has promised President Hoover his party's cooperation to prevent special session of the 72nd congress. The key to the situation now lies with the western farm bloc senators, who have been silent as to whether they will block appropriation legislation and force a special session.

President Hoover's announcement that Robinson has pledged his effort to promote early passage of the necessary appropriations, made late today, contained the following expression:

"The fear and apprehension which have been expressed over reports that delay or filibuster would be resorted to, to force an extra session of the congress, have, therefore, no foundation."

MATRON DEATH UNDER POLICE PROBE

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 13.—UP—The death of Mrs. Leone Bowles, pretty society matron, in the apartment of "the other woman," today swung from theories of suicide, to murder and back to suicide, following the report of an autopsy by the coroner's physician. Discrepancies in statements of Nelson C. Bowles, the husband-capitalist, and Miss Irma Loucks, the "other woman" led District Attorney Myers to order a complete investigation and a subsequent inquest next Tuesday. Neither is under arrest.

A theory advanced by some authorities that Mrs. Bowles may have died before a thrust through her breast with a bread knife was dispelled by the report of Dr. Frank R. Menne, pathologist of the University of Oregon medical school.

His autopsy showed that Mrs. Bowles died of a stab wound inflicted in the left side of the chest between the second and third ribs. The wound continued through the heart, as indicated by Dr. Paul B. Cooper, family physician, in his preliminary report Wednesday.

Was Normal
"I did not make an analysis of her stomach but an examination showed that organ to be perfectly normal," he said in answer to inquiries. "In fact Mrs. Bowles was a normal, healthy woman in every respect other than the stab wound in her chest."

"She had about two quarts of blood in her chest—a normal amount for such a wound. There was considerable evidence of internal hemorrhage but very little blood on the exterior of the wound."

Although Dr. Menne said the wound could have been self-inflicted, Dr. Earl Smith, coroner, questioned Miss Loucks rather carefully concerning the knife, since a part of a rib was cut by the knife thrust.

Probe On

The asserted absence of blood on the exterior of Mrs. Bowles' body and in the kitchen of the apartment led Chief of Police Jenkins to continue the investigation through three detectives.

Forcing continually to the forefront was the first theory—that Mrs. Bowles, under stress on finding that she could not dissuade her husband from continuing his alleged affair with his former personal stenographer took her life.

An unsettling bit of evidence came today when W. A. Parham, nightman of the Sunset Garage, here, said that every night for two weeks, Miss Loucks drove into the garage, where she kept her car, with Bowles as a passenger, after which they walked out together.

He said they appeared every morning and that Miss Loucks drove away with Bowles. He said there was no variation of the program Wednesday.

Bowles testified before authorities after his wife's death that he had spent the past two weeks at his Washbongal, Wash., fishing lodge.

Two brothers of Mrs. Bowles—E. W. Cronkite and L. G. Cronkite, with Mrs. Bowles' parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Cronkite, and a sister, Mrs. Elma Glover, all of Yakima, Wash., conferred with police and Coroner Earl Smith, urging them to make every attempt to clear up the case.

Temperatures ranged from 15 to 36 degrees above zero.

POLA WILL TELL ALL IN NEW BOOK

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Pola Negri is going to tell it all. When she has written another hundred pages or so, the Hollywood movie star will publish her memoirs in which she will tell all she knows about life, life in the film colony and just how she always felt about Rudolph Valentino.

In the next few months, while sitting in the Riviera sunshine awaiting the grinding out of her papers in the Paris divorce mill, Princess Pola will confess in type-writing, and when her autobiography comes off the presses it will be called "My Confession."

"People do not know me, they know only the Pola Negri that the Hollywood press agents have manufactured," Pola said today.

"I assure you I have suffered from their imaginations. I am writing my own story of myself, so that I can correct a lot of false impressions. I am writing all about my loves and everything in this book. I am telling my ambitions; how I want to be a star on the speaking stage again, after 12 years gesturing before the dumb cameras."

"I am going to New York in January and may go into a musical or dramatic piece but before that time my book will be complete. I will close the last chapter on the day the divorce court corrects another error in my career."

Pola is rather bitter about the talkies. There was a rather unpleasant rumor that Pola has not received any talking picture contract offers, because of her pronunciation, but Pola denies that.

"I'll have plenty of time when the talkies are really perfected," she said.

DEATH TOLL IN CAVEINS AT FORTY

LYONS, France, Nov. 13.—UP.—Fear of further landlides in the industrial section of Lyons where already two city blocks have been engulfed with a loss of at least 40 lives brought widespread evacuation of the area tonight.

Darkness slowed the efforts of rescue workers digging in the debris left by the three slides that crumpled the area early this morning. Municipal authorities said it was unlikely further bodies would be recovered for 24 hours due to the great depth of piled earth.

The delay had brought some confusion in casualty lists. It was believed, however, that 40 persons were killed, including all of the members of five families, 19 firemen and four policemen. The number of injured was put at 25. Although there is still possibility that some of those buried will survive, it was said that the death list may mount to as high as 75 or 80.

Engineers attributed the catastrophe to the flooding of the River Saone. Spring water originating in a hillside was denied its usual outlet due to the swollen streams and fissures were hollowed out as a result.

A steam roller recently fell thru the crust of earth near the scene of the catastrophe and scenes showing in the walls of the convent and hospital of St. Pothin's likewise gave warning of impending disaster. The warnings, however, were disregarded and even tonight, with fresh slides not unlikely, a few of the householders resented suggestions that they evacuate the region.

The first slide came at 1:15 a. m. Houses collapsed as their foundations sank or were toppled by the moving earth. The noise was tremendous.

Hardly had the first would-be rescuers made their way into the wreckage, however, before there came a second earth movement. This time stones and rocks from the hill top, as well as uncounted cubic tons of earth were hurled against the already scattered houses.

Thereafter came quiet for almost three hours. Police and firemen had begun to dig into the debris when, at 4:55 a. m., the third upheaval buried scores. This time a wing of the hospital was flattened and a number of patients injured.

The extent to which the earth was overturned was shown by the fact that during the entire day only eight bodies were recovered by the rescuers. In some cases the cries of living men could be heard but so tortuous was the path to where they lay plonked by rock that aid could not be brought them.

Twenty Thirty Club Entertained

Amusing life of a fireman was presented to Richmond 20-30 club in a skit presented by J. J. Barry assistant chief of the fire department yesterday.

Questions asked firemen that bring many a laugh, were repeated by Barry in his skit.

Musical entertainment was furnished by Ward McRacken who played the violin. Barney Welsgerber accompanied him.

A purse, the club's contribution to the Community Chest drive, was raised at the meeting. Plans for a Ladies Night to be held Nov. 25 were made at yesterday's affair.

City Destroyed By Huge Cyclone

PARIS, Nov. 13.—UP.—A dispatch from Hanoi, French Indo-China, tonight said the town of Aubourne, situated on the island of Rami, had been nearly destroyed by a cyclone Monday night.

It was feared the death toll would be enormous.

PLAY AT HIGH SCHOOL HERE TONIGHT

"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," the Richmond union high school students' association dramatic production for the fall term of 1930, will tonight be presented in the Richmond union high school auditorium.

"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" is believed to be one of the wisest choices for a Richmond high school dramatic presentation yet made by the play committee of the association. The play has been presented in the leading theatres of the country for many years, while May Robson has won the hearts of the American theatre-going public in the leading role of Aunt Mary. The three act comedy was written by Ann Harding, well-known screen actress.

The local high school production is expected to fill the high school auditorium to capacity this evening.

The cast of the Richmond high school production includes many students who have taken a notable part in many other amateur productions.

The role of Aunt Mary will be taken tonight by Vuokko Carlson, who has shown herself well capable in rehearsals of playing the part of the kind hearted, eccentric, old-fashioned spinster. Edwin Poole as Jack, Aunt Mary's nephew, greatly provokes his aunt by his unfortunate escapades at college. Claire Smith appears as Betty Burnett, sister of Bob Burnett, played by Frank Aussez. Marguerite Russell provides laughs in the role of The Girl From Kalamazoo. The parts of Clover and Mitchell, Jack's chums are taken by Paul Miller and Philip Carlin respectively.

Mary Rogocci, as Lucinda, Aunt Mary's servant, and Arthur Lee as Joshua, Aunt Mary's hired man, are a fine comedy team. The role of Daisy Mullins, village, is occupied by Violet Costa, while Henry Luer appears as James, the Burnett butler, and Mary Ellen Foley appears as Janet, the Burnett maid. Mr. Stebbins, Aunt Mary's lawyer, is played by William McCloskey.

"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" is being directed by Mrs. Nellie W. Pherson of the high school faculty. Realistic stage settings have been prepared under the direction of Mrs. Bernice James. Theodore Kaphan will act as stage manager. Costumes for the play have been made by the sewing classes of the school under the direction of Mrs. Jennie Gardner of the faculty. Henry Luer will supervise properties. Furniture for the production has been provided by Breuner's Furniture company.

The Richmond union high school band will play during the intermissions under the direction of George M. Morris. The musical program will include: "Semper Fidelis" march by Sousa, "In a Persian Market" by A. W. Ketelby, "In a Rose Garden" and "Reverie" by Tobia Acciani, "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" by Jessel and "Just for Fun" march by Simpkins.

The play will begin at eight o'clock this evening in the Richmond union high school auditorium.

Tardieu Given Confidence Vote

PARIS, Nov. 14.—UP.—The government won a bitter fight for its life early today in the Chamber of Deputies.

After a stormy session, the chamber by 323 to 270 voted confidence in the cabinet of Premier Andre Tardieu, on its foreign policy, and the crisis seemed past for the time.

Tardieu gave his speech after criticism of the government of rapprochement with Germany by showing them there was no intention to revise the treaty of Versailles.

$37,000,000 For Chicago Yule Clubs

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—UP.—More than $37,000,000 in Christmas savings funds will be spent for presents this year in Chicago, bankers estimated today.

Total Christmas savings funds in the metropolitan area were placed at $37,000,000 by the General Trust company, a slight decrease over last year's figure. Last year 18 per cent of the savings were immediately replaced in savings accounts and bankers figured that about 20 per cent would be rebanked this year.

PERU IN GRIP OF 24 HOUR STRIKE

LIMA, Peru, Nov. 13.—UP.—Peru was paralyzed by a 24 hour general strike today, with two departments of the country under martial law, and the nation generally in fear of severe bloodshed.

The strike, effective from 7 a. m. today until 7 a. m. tomorrow, was a sequel to riots high in the Andes yesterday, when Indian miners ran amuck in the Cerro de Pasco region and killed two Americans and an Austrian.

Foreigners, men, women and children, fled from the region, and all the great copper mines were closed. Refugee trains reached Lima today, after a slow, dangerous journey 12,000 feet down the Andes slopes toward the sea.

Censorship Established

Scores of foreigners were in the mountains still, and their fate was uncertain in view of the rage of the Indian miners, descendants of the Incas, over what they regard as oppression by the invaders.

Censorship was established tonight. The city remained calm.

The general strike affected transportation in Lima. The capital was quiet, but street cars and auto busses were halted and many had to walk to work. With the exception of a few taxicabs, the city's streets were almost without traffic, and a strange quiet prevailed.

The tie-up due to the general strike included steam trains operating between Lima and Callao, the capital's port.

Refugees Arrive

The first trainload of refugees brought some 150 men, women and children to Lima. They said 60 of the 210 persons who started from the town of La Oroya, 125 miles east of Lima high in the mountains had remained at Chosica.

The refugees were bedraggled and nerve shaken and showed the effects of the strain.

They said at least a dozen foreigners remained unaccounted for in the Malpasco region, near La Oroya, center of the Cerro de Pasco Copper corporation's properties in the Andes. The labor riots began at Malpasco, when several hundred native miners clashed with the police. At least 15 miners were killed in the battle, and 22 others wounded. The riot occurred when the miners sought to proceed to La Oroya from Malpasco against the arrest of 33 labor agitators, taken to Lima but subsequently released.

Three Killed

The foreign casualties remained at three dead, as far as could be ascertained. The two Americans were John William Chapman of Chicago, and E. L. Tripardi, of Brooklyn. The Austrian has not been identified.

Two other Americans were among the badly wounded. They are M. L. Kelly and J. A. Morgan, both of whom were brought to Lima for treatment.

Prohibition Sure Issue In 1932 Observers Agree

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—UP.—To the delight of many political leaders and the consternation of numerous others, prohibition is now regarded as destined to be a chief issue in the 1932 presidential contest.

This feeling exists among the highest leaders in both parties. Fears that party lines will be wrecked are equally strong. Democrats have their experience of 1928 fresh in memory. Republicans have warning of Simeon Pess, Republican national chairman, a dry, that the party must stand for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment or be smashed.

THE WOMAN OF IT

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

What the Modern Home Can Do for the Child

WOMEN are hearing on every hand that the family is breaking up and the home is disappearing. News headlines of divorce statistics, news stories of wayward children and of tragedies in the family relations courts, seem daily to darken the shadows in the domestic picture. And yet—thousands of home women look about them and see the happy home and family life that doesn't get into the newspapers, or into the pessimistic statistics, or into the sociological strictures.

These women see their own homes, the homes of their friends, where small David and Margaret Anne, Mildred and Jackie, "the best children in the world," are daily growing in health and grace and intelligence. The wise, affectionate, modern young mothers of these youngsters know, from their most intimate experience, how sound and useful home life still can be—and is. Superficially, it isn't the home life of a generation ago—the life of a big family on a big farm, where children did chores and housework, went barefoot by day and stayed at home evenings, grew up in surroundings of the old values: loyalty, participation in family life, simplicity, love.

But modern life, for the modern child, may have all the best of the old values: loyalty, participation in family life, simplicity, love.

Modern home life also may have new graces of its own which equip boys and girls for a more sophisticated age.

Few women with minds and hearts and children will agree that there is yet any substitute for the best sort of home; few but are trying themselves to make that home, to create a satisfactory family life.

NEWS on the right side of the ledger, from the point of view of these women, is the announcement of the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection, which meets on Nov. 19 in Washington. President Hoover himself is earnestly supporting this public effort to emphasize and dignify and expand all that is being done for the next generation. One of the most important reports to be made to the conference—so good mothers will note with special satisfaction—is the vindication of the values of real family life today, to be offered by Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the United States Bureau of Home Economics.

Family life, insists Dr. Stanley, is not undergoing any fundamental change. Only superficial functions are being removed from the home. Serious maladjustment is found in children deprived by accident of the right sort of family life.

Just what should the family today do for the child? In a study based on the home life and the relations with parents of 8,000 school children, the following principles have been established:

"The ideal family," says Dr. Stanley, "would provide for the child a friendly and hospitable environment for the development of his emotions and abilities, a secure relationship in a group of definite social status, where in he was loved, protected and encouraged. The child wants to belong to a family, to have his own name, his own parents, his own things. He wants his family to be as good as the families of his friends. He needs the affection, the security, and the encouragement of his family to fortify him for successful contacts in the outside world."

"If his parents are happy in their adjustment to each other, if they are working hopefully toward the fulfillment of an ideal of living, if they love their children with a sincere and unselfish love—in short, if they are well-balanced individuals gifted with a certain amount of insight, they are apt to provide the child with a wholesome background, which will contribute more to his development than more material advantages."

IN NOTHING is the intelligent mother more interested than in nourishing and stimulating her child's intelligence, educating him in the broadest sense, preparing him to live wisely and beautifully. Here, again, as Dr. Stanley says, the modern family is accused of failing; yet in many instances it does not fail either in transmitting social culture to children or helping their minds to grow.

The head of the Bureau of Home Economics, of course, recognizes that today the child is affected by many outside influences. As she points out, "The school, the social center, the visiting teacher, the visiting nurse, the juvenile court, the lawyer and the doctor must be prepared to hand on knowledge of human values as well as the special content of their contribution."

But, she continues, the mother and the home the mother creates still are of vast importance in the child's mental growth. Here are some of the ways in which it can be helped at home.

"Willingness to answer questions, encouragement of constructive play and the study of nature together are family practices stimulative to intellectual development. Sympathy with the child's intellectual interests encourages him to further efforts; and if parents are interested in the education of their children, their interest should extend to an understanding of the schools their children attend and a knowledge of modern educational trends."

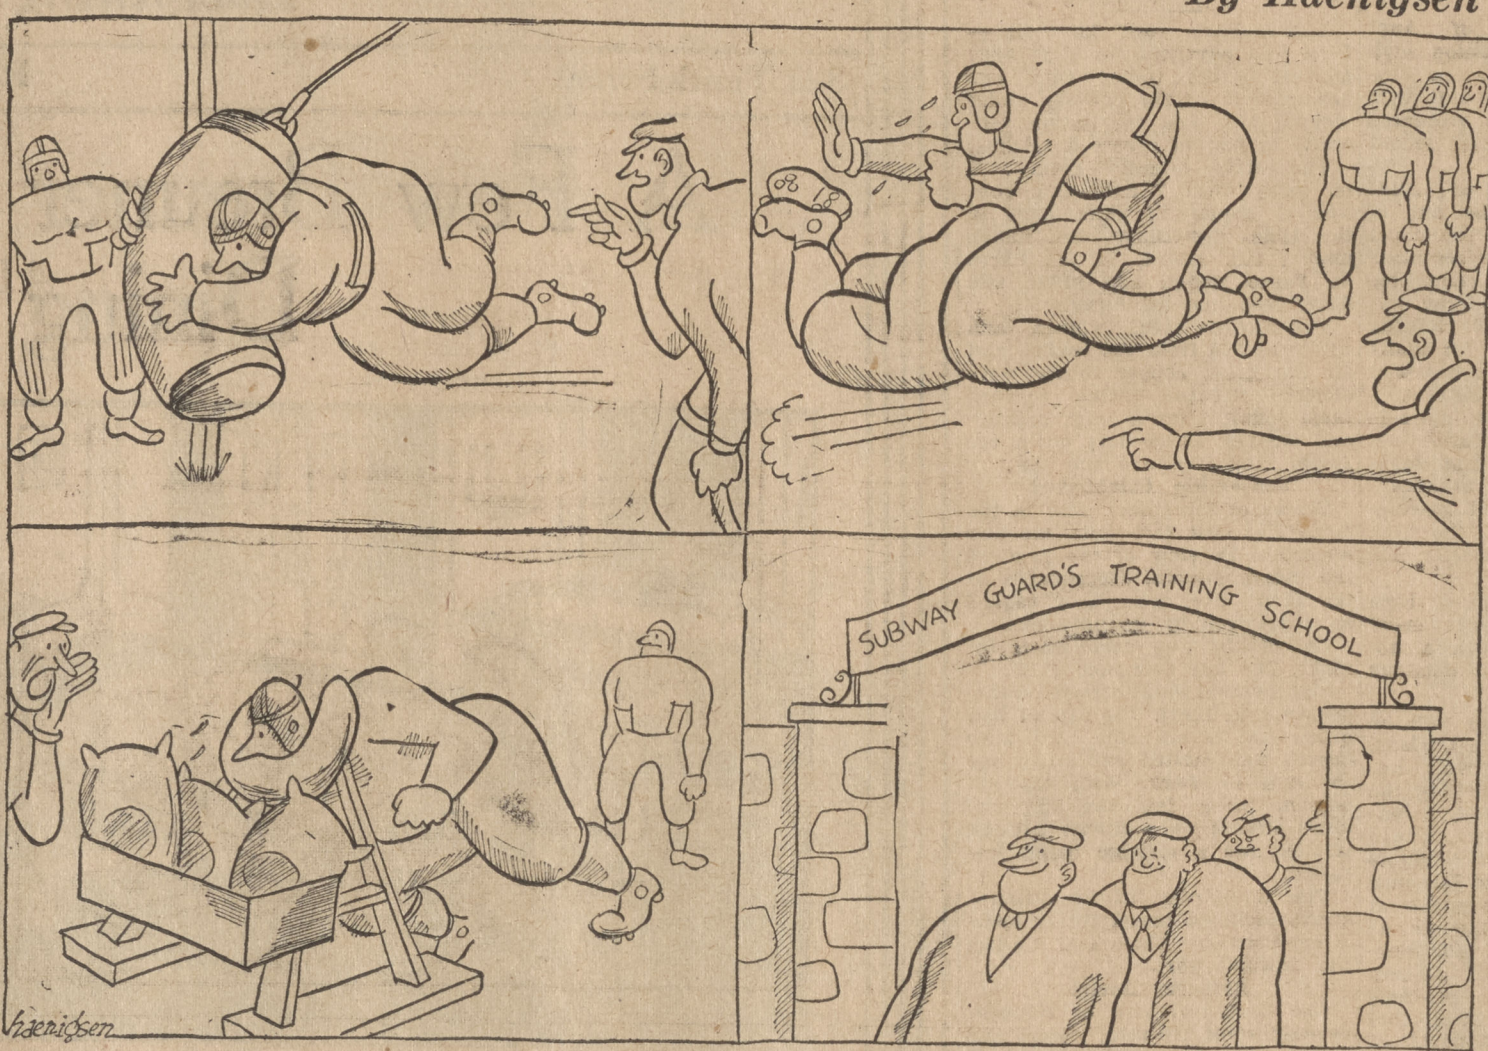

"In the physical plant of the home the education of the child can be fostered by providing him with the facilities for study—a place to study in uninterrupted privacy; materials for developmental activities, both intellectual and recreational; pets, materials and instruments for practice in the arts; books and periodicals. There are many educational values to be attained through participation in household activities."

THE home is vitally responsible in refining the taste of children. Dr. Stanley reminds mothers, "People seem naturally to prefer the types of things that were found in their early surroundings," she emphasizes. "Except in cases of abject poverty and squalid surroundings, good taste can be displayed in the home."

"Clothing plays an important part in such artistic training. The esthetic satisfaction from well-selected clothing, particularly during adolescence, should be taken into consideration as well as economy and utility. The speech, vocabulary and voice of the individual are largely a product of early associations. Bad habits of speech acquired in childhood may be a lifelong handicap."

Finally, the home must give the child its first ideas—right or wrong—of marriage, parenthood, moral standards. In the opinion of the committee on family life, it would seem that, with all the modern remains plenty for her to do, and today, as in the past, so far as children are concerned, "there is no place like home!"

Slip Covers for Decoration

THERE are many interesting and practical uses for slip covers aside from that of protection from summer dust, as many housekeepers have found out, and there are many materials from which to make them other than the regulation slip-cover fabrics of tan or dark blue. Almost any old chair, if its springs are in good form and its legs steady, can be made to take on quite an air by introducing a slip cover of some gay flowered chintz to it, and that old haircloth set, relic of Victorian days, can be hauled in from its storage place and made a thing of up-to-date beauty simply by taking thought for it in a slip-cover way.

It has been done, and so successfully in at least one instance. Instead of chintz or any of the cotton or linen fabrics a lovely striped silk with tiny sprays of flowers scattered over it was used on the sofa, and the two large chairs and on the six other chairs a flowered silk without the stripe and of a deeper shade. To have done them all alike would have been too much, and this way provided a little variety without any striking contrast. As the haircloth is, as everyone knows, peculiarly slippery, it was first given a covering of ordinary muslin.

It is often a good idea to make the backs and seats of different materials, and frequently binding the seams on the outside with a tape is effective, but the binding must be perfectly done. As for that, half the beauty of the slipcover is in its perfect finish—the all its seams are even, its lines graceful as those of the chair itself, and all its parts fitted together with utmost precision.

Good Points That Outweigh Disappointments

By Alma Zais

Dear Miss Zais:

Inclosed please find a floor plan for my living room and foyer. The room faces east; walls are cream with deep ivory trim, almost a light buff.

The furniture I have—that is, the davenport and wing chair—are overstuffed pieces, very dull and lifeless, and I am wondering if you would suggest slip covers for both pieces, or the davenport anyway, in a solid color, for I get so tired looking at the conglomeration of colors in the rug and furniture that I am sure a decided change to even up the room and make it more attractive would tend to improve my state of mind about the place.

I have no pictures on the walls, rather than make a poor selection, I've done without. I did think of a mirror over the chest, also one over the desk in the foyer. What is your idea? You will note on the diagram two bare spots in the room—to the right of the davenport and to the left of the gateway table. What would you suggest for these positions? I shall be very glad to have your opinion on a general overhauling of this room, using the same furniture, together with any new pieces you might suggest.

As yet I have no covering for the floor of the foyer. The window desk and chair are mahogany. The chair is a rush-bottom ladderback. I have been thinking of either small scatter Oriental or perhaps a few hooked rugs. May I ask you to settle this question for me also?

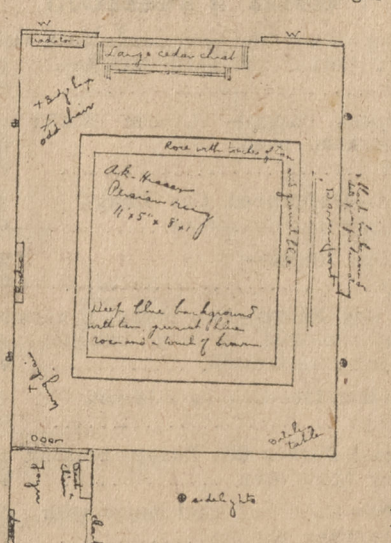

To sum up the entire matter—my apartment, consisting of three rooms and bath and costing approximately $3,500 to furnish, is a total disappointment to me, for I just simply do not rest comfortably in it. I never go in for frills and fancies of any sort. I like good, substantial yet attractive things and it is my one desire to have a pleasant and useful home, one that will reflect both charm and individuality, and I do know—for I read your articles religiously in the Evening World—that you can and will solve this big problem, even with the poor tools you have to work with.

(MRS.) M. M. C.

Balanced Color and Better Arrangement the Answer Here

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

WITH $3,500 spent and only dissatisfaction on hand, Mrs. C. is perhaps more in need of a good dose of encouragement than recommendations for drastic or costly changes. Such a letter indicates inherent good taste to begin with, and the sum spent is sufficient to have given her appointments of good quality. We cannot believe that the room is as hopeless as it sounds, but can readily appreciate that the lack of pleasing color and pattern and an uncongenial arrangement may make it seem quite unattractive.

To get ourselves in a fair state of mind about it, let us first consider the good points of the room. It is large and of excellent proportions; evidently receives good lighting from the two east windows; the wall space is unusually ample and free from disfiguring doorways, and the two tones of ivory and buff make a pleasing background for the color scheme in which the deep blue of the rug predominates.

True the rug is a little small for the room. We should have preferred a foot more at its each end. But if Mrs. C. will darken her floors to a soft, rich walnut color, and in the foyer use one long Oriental runner in harmony with the living room rug, she will find the effect is quite acceptable.

A comparison of the two diagrams will show certain changes in arrangement which should make the room more comfortable and attractive. We would not have chosen the large cedar chest for use in an important position—either between the two windows as in the original plan, or against the left wall as indicated in the rearrangement. A beautiful sofa table of a fine, dignified secretary or commode would have been much more impressive for the long wall opposite the sofa. However, in this position the cedar chest furnishes but to balance the sofa, and with the mirror above it and a bowl of flowers to break the plainness of its top, it may do very well for the present. On a second thought perhaps it is not a low chest of the window-seat type, but a higher piece with drawers. So much the better.

We would bring the desk and rush-seat chair in from the foyer and use them between the two windows, with a pretty hanging shelf in the space between them. The gateway table, fully opened, may be placed to the left of the sofa, with the overstuffed chair beside it. The wing chair with its high back will be best for the radiator corner and a new open-arm chair and one end table are needed to complete the sofa group. There may be a side chair to the left of the cedar chest, but a more effective then having a neutral ground and flowers that tone in with the colors found in the rug, emphasizing the blues, of course, and carrying the secondary colors for accent. And by "neutral ground" in this case is meant a tone such as cream, ivory, light or darker buff.

We would use this same material for slip-covers for both the wing chair and sofa. The overstuffed chair we would cover in some plain or self-colored material in a lovely greenish blue. Velvet would be a nice fabric, but is not as durable as several other equally attractive materials such as tulle, rug or wool damask. The logical color for the open-arm chair would be gold, either in wool damask or velvet. The screen suggested might be of the scenic wall paper type in harmonious green tones on buff; or it might combine both blue and green and thus be doubly harmonious with the carpet.

We now have effective though restful color and pattern in good balance, so placed that it gives life and meaning to the room. As we enter the eye is carried first to the chintz-hung

TICKETS BY TELEGRAPH

YOU can now buy tickets to New York theaters at telegraph offices all over the city. Here's how it's done:

HUSBAND—Let's go to the theater tomorrow night.

WIFE—That's fine. But can you get good seats?

HUSBAND—Absolutely! Now that ticket scalpers in New York have been abolished, the independent consumer can get seats on the 45-yard line.

WIFE—But I don't want to go to a football game.

HUSBAND—I mean it is possible to get seats in the third row.

WIFE—How?

HUSBAND—By applying to the nearest telegraph office. Watch me. (Picks up the telephone.) Gimme the nearest telegraph office.

VOICE—This is the telegraph office.

HUSBAND—I want two seats for tomorrow night for "Sadie's Scarlet Sweater."

VOICE—What have you got?

WIFE—To whom is the message addressed?

HUSBAND—I ain't sending a message. I want two theater tickets for tomorrow night.

VOICE—Oh, you wish to send a night letter. To whom?

HUSBAND—Content! I don't want to send a night letter. I want two seats for tomorrow night.

VOICE—What is your number, please?

HUSBAND—I'm not speaking from a cell in Sing Sing! I haven't got a number.

VOICE—I am asking for your telephone number.

HUSBAND—My telephone number is Bling 9-9.

VOICE—And in whose name is it listed?

HUSBAND—None.

VOICE—What is your name, please?

HUSBAND—My name is Horace B. Glonk and I wear a 6 1/2 shoe.

VOICE—You say you live at 678 Astoria?

HUSBAND—No. I live at 394 Maple Boulevard and I want two tickets for tomorrow night.

VOICE—You wish two theater tickets for tomorrow night?

HUSBAND—That's it. Two tickets for "Sadie's Scarlet Sweater." I want 'em on the aisle.

VOICE—Is that one word or two?

HUSBAND—Is WHAT one word or two?

VOICE—Do you wish to say "TII" or "TII"?

HUSBAND—I said I want two tickets on the AISLE!

VOICE—Spell it, please.

HUSBAND—A for Arthur, I for Ida, S for Susan, L for Lester, and E for Earl.

VOICE—We have no play by that name listed. You don't mean Earl Carter's "Vanities," do you?

HUSBAND—NO! I mean "Sadie's Scarlet Sweater." I want two aisle seats for tomorrow night. TWO!

VOICE—One moment, please. You windows with the desk group making an inviting picture.

Then we are conscious of the comfortable slip-covered sofa and the blue-green and gold chairs drawn up for a good conversation. There will be several plain colored cushions on the sofa, of course, and a lamp with books and smoking accessories on the gateway table. On the end table we might like to see a green or amber glass bowl containing a Chinese water plant and a decorative cigarette box.

For wall decoration we have the mirror above the chest, the screen and the hanging shelf. . . . but we must have pictures, for it is almost impossible to conceive of a thoroughly homelike room without them. Here, where there is plenty of color in curtains, rugs and slip-covers, it is not necessary to add more to the walls. One fine large etching or an engraving in soft, brown tones would be charming above the sofa; a smaller but equally good etching may cover the radio. And that finishes the problem.

The changes suggested need not be at all expensive, but they will cure so much of the disappointment. . . . and add so much to the effect of the original $3,500 investment. . . . that their value cannot be overestimated.

A DISH A DAY

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

Many housewives who do not do their own cooking ordinarily, and who plan to dine out on the cook's night off like to keep a stock of canned goods on the shelf so that in an emergency they can assemble an appetizing dinner on a few minutes' notice. These dinners need no apology, for they can be elaborate affairs, glistening with antipasto and clear green turtle soup with sherry; they may include a savory roast ham or chicken, pungent stuffing for a grand climax they may rise to imported brandied plum pudding or baked stuffed oranges in grenadine. Only the salad will tax the cook's ingenuity, for nothing from a can can replace a crisp green salad. Asparagus with strips of pimiento or artichoke hearts is about the nearest approach to an acceptable salad from a can.

In the average household, however, the cost of such a dinner would be so staggering that the kitchen budget wouldn't recover its balance within weeks. Luckily canned goods offer almost as wide a choice to the economical housewife as the balance wouldn't recover its balance within weeks. Assuming that time, as well as the money, is at a premium in preparing this dinner, the following menu is a good choice:

Clam bouillon with bread sticks
Corned beef and cabbage
with pickled pearl onions
Baked succotash
Artichoke hearts with French dressing
Hum pudding
Coffee

If the refrigerator offers some resources, as every good ice box should, a crisp salad may be substituted for the artichokes and baked apples stuffed with packaged mince-meat will provide a more unusual dessert.

The meat and vegetable course of this dinner may be prepared in fifteen minutes. If an ordinary canned corned beef is used the potatoes for the hash will have to be parboiled, of course. That isn't necessary, however, as all markets and chain stores carry canned corned beef hash, which needs only to be heated and served. It is much better when dressed up with pearl onions, dotted with butter and baked. If ice box supplies include a green pepper, add that to the succotash by way of heightening its flavor.

Canned plum pudding has been offered at bargain prices in markets for the last week, and it is well to have a stock of this on hand as an emergency dessert. The substitute dessert suggested, baked apples stuffed with mince-meat, presupposes that you have apples in the house. And every household, even non-housekeeping, should have a supply of apples on hand for the sake of the unemployed men who are selling them as well as for its own health and happiness.

Stuffed baked apples are prepared as follows:

Pare and core the apples and allow one-half tablespoon of lemon juice, one tablespoon of brown sugar and two tablespoons of mince-meat for each one. Study the directions on the package of the mince-meat that you are using. Some varieties are dehydrated and need to be boiled for fifteen minutes with water before using. Place the apples in a baking dish, fill the core-cavity with mince-meat, dot the top with butter and bake in a moderate oven for thirty to forty minutes, or until the apples are tender.

In preparing the dinner suggested above, the apples should be put in the oven first. After they have cooked for about twenty minutes put in the meat and vegetables.

Columbia University was behind $344,000 on its fiscal year. They should start teaching the boys more football and they could wipe the deficit out.

After playing miniature golf a couple of months, a fellow figures a ride around the block in a taxi is a long drive.

Rum Death Rate Reduced—Headline. The liquor's been cut, too.

Football teams should be enthusiastic for post-season games to help out unemployment funds. A lot of college players are always out of jobs themselves when the football season ends.

An Olean, N. Y., boy set an endurance record playing miniature golf for 145 hours. That also sets the season's record for playing hooker.

WILL FIGHT IS SETTLED

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—UP—Terms of a settlement out of court by which Mrs. Marie Sproule, wife of William Sproule, former president of the Southern Pacific company, divides the $500,000 estate of her mother, Mrs. Veronica Baird, with a son and grandson of Mrs. Baird, were revealed here today.

Thomas R. Baird, the son, will receive $125,000 in cash and property while Miles T. (Jackson) Baird, the grandson, obtains $75,000, mostly in cash.

Court proceedings were dropped by Mrs. Sproule because she had abided by a last wish of her mother, heretofore undisclosed. The final request was in a letter written by Mrs. Baird in Paris in 1913, which was read into the court record.

"In case anything happens to me you will find my last will in the box of the safe deposit," Mrs. Baird wrote. "I have made the will just exactly as I wished it to stand, and if there is any contest or dispute over it, I wish you to respect my wishes and fight it. It must stand as I have made it. I have left nothing to my son. I know and believe you will always assist them if they are deserving."

Mrs. Lydia, the former Dodie Valencia, does not share in the settlement. For many years she

NEW CLUES IN CHANGE ASKED BY INDIAN FORCES

MARTINEZ, Nov. 13.—Numbers of 20, $50 bills taken in the Southern Pacific train holdup near Albany Nov. 7 were revealed by officers here today. The numbers range from L-913401 to L-913450.

Officers were checking reports today that two men who may have participated in the holdup were in this city two days previous to the crime.

Clerks at Montgomery Ward store here said that two men entered and asked for 45 calibre shells similar to the blank cartridge they had in their possession.

It was said that the men who were rather young approached Mrs. W. J. McLeod, who referred them to Percy Helgestad. Both of these clerks were out of the city today and could not be located to confirm the report. Mrs. McLeod was on a vacation while Helgestad has been transferred to the company's store at Redwood City.

It was said that Helgestad told them they did not carry such shells in stock. License number of the car in which the men drove to the store was not obtained.

Mrs. E. D. Blakemore, also a member of the firm here is said to have seen the men.

Reports from Sacramento indicating that the bandits may have doubled back on their trail after having apparently been in that vicinity were being checked by officers of this district today.

An automobile found in the capital city district in which purchase tags from stores here and Pittsburg were found indicated that the holdup men were in this vicinity previous to the commission of the crime.

A $3300 home is nearing completion at 249 Sea View drive. Frank Crabbalo is owner of the project. Clemens Parel is constructing a home at the corner of Clayton and Lincoln streets at a cost of approximately $2000.

consciousness is steadily being awakened." Revolt Seen

The message makes no attempt to minimize the significance of the nationalist movement which has led to great disorder in India under the leadership of the Mahatma Gandhi.

"It is inevitable," it says, "that this nationalist impetus should come, and it would be a grave mistake to underestimate its force or depreciate its value. Regarding constitutional reform, the despatch states that there are a certain 'purposes' for which Great Britain must continue to safeguard India, but suggests that otherwise, India should be free to manage her own affairs. These purposes, it points out, are chiefly defense, maintenance of foreign relations, internal security, fulfillment of financial obligations, financial stability, protection of minorities, and the prevention of unfair economic discrimination.

Change Asked Repeatedly the despatch stresses the necessity of providing a strong central government, and to that end it proposes greatly to widen the powers of the executive—the British viceroy and his council.

To counteract the effect of this augmentation of the viceroy's power, it is suggested that the executive be subjected more closely to public influence and opinion through the inclusion of elected Indian legislators within the council.

In conclusion, the message declares: "We have endeavored to point the way to action that may now be taken to place upon the constitution the first, definite impress of dominion status. If we have read history aright, it is exactly in this way that each and all of the dominions have attained constitutional nationhood.

Asks Power "The government of India would then (under these proposals) be a distinct entity, capable of acting in domestic matters on its own initiative and, within the orbit of its uncontrolled powers, free to pursue its own policy."

Although in general it approves the Simon proposals regarding the Indian provincial governments, it offers numerous recommendations contrary to the suggestions made by the Simon investigating committee.
